

What's on the ballot?

A 2024 General Election Worksheet

BOLTS

boltsmag.org

Voters are deciding the fate of thousands of ballots measures and public office in November, from the president and governors to judges and county sheriffs.

Bolts has identified more than 500 elections to watch closely up and down the ballot and why they matter.

On our website, you can access an online version of this worksheet that contains more links and information about these races. We will update that page with results on and after Election Night.

Bolts has published guides to supreme court races, races for state election chiefs, and prosecutor and sheriff races. We also cover individual elections that affect voting rights and criminal justice.

State boards

- AZ Corporate Commission (three seats): Democrats could grab a majority on this body, which regulates state utilities, if they sweep all three seats on the ballot.
- NH Executive council (five seats): This unusual body has powers like confirming state judges and other appointments. The GOP currently has a 4-1 edge.
- NE Board of education (Districts 1-4): While these races are nonpartisan, board members differ on issues such as charter schools and trans rights. Earlier this year, for instance, the board voted 5-to-3 against adopting a book-banning policy; four seats are up this year, all held by members who sided with the majority in that decision.

- NV Board of education (District 1): A conservative activist affiliated with the organization Moms for Liberty is running for one of the four elected seats on Nevada's board of education in District 1.
- TX Board of education (District 11): The GOP already dominates this board, though conservatives have tried to push it further right. Bolts is watching the election in District 11 in particular.

In Delaware, Maine, New Hampshire, North Carolina, and Tennessee, voters are deciding their elections chief indirectly this fall—by choosing the public officials who'll have appointment power. Our Bolts guide to every state selecting their elections chief walks you through each of them.

Local election administrators

- AZ Maricopa County recorder: The elections office in the nation's largest swing county is up for grabs; the Republican nominee ousted the GOP incumbent in the primary with heavy support from prominent election deniers. More in Bolts.
- AZ Yuma County recorder: The GOP nominee, with ties to election deniers, also ousted an incumbent in his primary in his bid to take over the elections system.
- AZ Cochise County recorder: The GOP incumbent has worked with election deniers to make the county a hotbed of conspiracies. He is running for reelection.
- FL Alachua, Hillsborough, Monroe, Palm Beach, Osceola, Seminole Counties supervisor of elections: A coalition of 'America First' candidates want to take over these offices across Florida. More in Bolts.
- FL Miami-Dade County supervisor of elections: Miami-Dade is electing this office for the first time. The Democratic nominee is a former GOP lawmaker who switched parties to protest Trump's lies about 2020.
- MI Antrim County clerk: This county's clerk was set to retire. She is mounting a write-in bid to stay in the office, upset that a candidate with affinities with election conspiracists won the GOP primary.

Other state officials

- AR Result Treasurer: The Republican secretary of state is now running for treasurer, shortly after helping stall and sink a ballot measure that was meant to protect abortion rights.
- MT Clerk of the supreme court: This is the only state in the nation that elects its supreme court clerk. The GOP incumbent is making the case he can be a conservative guardrail.
- NC Lieutenant governor: In the race to replace Mark Robinson, the Republican nominee assails "woke" ideas like social-emotional learning.
- NC Superintendent of public instruction: The conservative GOP nominee, who ousted the Republican incumbent in the primary, has called public schools "indoctrination centers."
- NC Auditor: A conservative Republican is challenging an appointed Democrat, and promising to set up a division to pursue investigations into elections.
- NC Labor commissioner: This office has been in GOP hands for decades, but labor groups are hoping to elect the first hourly union worker, a Democrat, to the job.
- NC Secretary of state: Democrat Elaine Marshall has been secretary of state for more than a quarter of a century, and is running for an eighth term.
- NC Treasurer, agricultural commissioner, and insurance commissioner: North Carolina Democrats likely have better shots elsewhere to win downballot offices, but if they have a great night, watch these three races for upsets.
- OR Treasurer: In this open race, two state senators are facing off to be the next treasurer and oversee the state's investments.
- PA Auditor general: A Republican incumbent faces a Democratic lawmaker who came off an unsuccessful Senate bid to challenge him.
- PA Treasurer: A Republican incumbent faces a Democratic substance abuse counselor; while Democrats once targeted this office, the party has not prioritized the race this fall.
- WA Superintendent of public instruction: This is a non-partisan race, but Democratic leaders support Chris Reykdal and the state GOP endorsed David Olson. They differ on issues like school vouchers and policies toward trans students.
- WA Public land commissioner: This is an open race for the office that oversees the department of natural resources, with a former Republican member of Congress running to flip the office.

The states of Delaware, Indiana, Missouri, Montana, North Dakota, Vermont, Utah, and Washington are electing some statewide executive officials who are not on this present list.

Local leadership: Mayors, councils, county boards

- | | Result | | Result | | |
|----|--------------------------|---|--------|--------------------------|---|
| AZ | <input type="checkbox"/> | Control of Maricopa County board: Democrats may flip the local government in one of the nation's largest counties; alternatively, the far-right could grow its presence on the board. It'll come down to the races in the first and third districts. | NV | <input type="checkbox"/> | Las Vegas mayor: Democrats are bidding to regain the mayor's office for the first time since 2010 with Shelley Berkley, a former Democratic member of Congress, who faces Victoria Seaman, a Republican city councilmember. |
| AZ | <input type="checkbox"/> | Mesa mayor: Mark Freeman and Scott Smith will become the mayor of Arizona's third most populous cities; they moved to the runoff over more progressive and conservative candidates. | NJ | <input type="checkbox"/> | Atlantic County commission: Democrats could flip control of this county, which Joe Biden carried in 2020, if they flip three GOP-held seats. |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | Los Angeles city council: Councilmember Kevin de León, who refused to resign after being recorded in a conversation making racist remarks alongside other Los Angeles officials, faces challenger Ysabel Jurado. | NJ | <input type="checkbox"/> | Cumberland and Gloucester County commissions: These counties offer a test of whether the GOP can maintain its gains in South Jersey. Democrats could flip back the commission in Gloucester County, and make a dent in the GOP edge in Cumberland County. |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | San Diego County board: Can Democrats defend control of the board in this populous county, which they won in 2020? Watch the race for the third district. | NM | <input type="checkbox"/> | Sandoval County commission: Can Democrats flip the commission of this county, home to Bernalillo? They would need to flip one of the second or fourth districts. |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | Oakland mayor: There is a recall election against Oakland Mayor Sheng Thao, a progressive first elected in 2022 who also faces a federal probe. | OK | <input type="checkbox"/> | Tulsa mayor: The sitting mayor is a Republican, but the GOP was shut out of this runoff between two Democrats —Monroe Nichols, a progressive lawmaker, and Karen Keith, a county commissioner who is now courting more conservative voters. |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | Sacramento mayor: In this open, nonpartisan race, an epidemiologist is making the case that her public health background would benefit the city as it confronts issues of gun violence and homelessness. More in Bolts. | OK | <input type="checkbox"/> | Tulsa city council: This race has drawn attention for the candidacy of a Republican who opposes public funding for art and museums, and says the city library is a "haven for the homeless." |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | San Diego mayor: In this nonpartisan race, Mayor Todd Gloria faces Larry Turner, a police officer challenging him from his right. | OR | <input type="checkbox"/> | Portland mayor: This mayor's office is transitioning to be more of a figurehead under a new system but there's still a fierce battle between 19 candidates , to be decided with ranked-choice voting. |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | San Francisco mayor: In this nonpartisan race, Mayor London Breed, who has pushed changes to boost policing, is seeking a second term against opponents like Mark Farrell who want an approach that's more punitive, as well as against the more progressive Aaron Peskin. | TX | <input type="checkbox"/> | Austin mayor: Mayor Kirk Watson has piled up campaign cash as he faces four challengers . |
| CA | <input type="checkbox"/> | San Francisco board of supervisors (six seats): Dean Preston, the progressive supervisor of District 5, battles challengers who disagree with him on criminal justice and housing. In District 1, progressive incumbent Connie Chan faces challengers to her right . District 7's Myrna Melgar has challengers who want to boost police presence. The third , ninth , and 11th districts are open races with clear contrasts between the city's left-leaning and centrist blocs. | VA | <input type="checkbox"/> | Richmond mayor: This nonpartisan race has been fairly quiet and low on policy contrasts, The Richmonder reports , and more of a test of how the city's demographics are changing. |
| FL | <input type="checkbox"/> | Tallahassee council: Progressives could flip control of the Tallahassee council if former Mayor Dot Inman-Johnson ousts council member Curtis Richardson in a nonpartisan race. | WA | <input type="checkbox"/> | Seattle city council (District 8): Only one council seat is up this year: Tanya Woo, an incumbent councilor part of a centrist faction , faces a more progressive challenger, Alexis Mercedes Rinck. |
| MT | <input type="checkbox"/> | Bozeman study commission: Tenants' rights advocates are using a once-in-a-decade chance to reshape the way in which their municipal government is structured, an effort that's now coming to a head in the race for five seats on a study commission. More in Bolts. | UT | <input type="checkbox"/> | Salt Lake County mayor, and control of the board: Democrats could gain control of Utah's largest county: Democratic County Mayor Jennie Wilson is running for reelection, and her party hopes to flip the board if they win three of four seats on the ballot. |
| | | | VT | <input type="checkbox"/> | Addison County high bailiff: This little-known office connected to the criminal legal system features a local official who is using his bully pulpit to argue for the abolition of elected sheriffs. More in Bolts. |
| | | | DC | <input type="checkbox"/> | Washington city council: Few of the council races are even contested this fall , though there is technically some competition for the at-large council seats, one of which has to go to a non-Democrat. |
